

Alison Reilly
Group HR Director

Working in HR can bring many challenges, however, what I love about this job is that no two days are the same.

You get to meet lots of unique individuals working in the business and help them in many ways each and every day.

HR was not my initial career path. Managing sports facilities for over 10 years taught me a lot about people being the driver behind a successful business.

From there I moved into a career in attaining my Masters in Human Resource Management whilst working full time and raising two young children, something I am extremely proud of.
